

Abstract

This invention provides a system and method for inconspicuously and randomly encoding watermark information into a font encoding vector of document. The invention uses a random number generator to create a key that specifies which indices in the encoding 5 vector should be modified to carry the watermark information. The key may also be used to detect and decode watermarks that were previously embedded into a font encoding vector.